

GEORGE ROUY

b. 1994, Sittingbourne, Kent, UK. Lives and works in Faversham, UK.

George Rouy is recognized as a leading figure in a new generation of international artists. His dynamic and signature use of the human figure, vexed with desire, freedom, alienation and crisis, speaks to the extremities of our time. Bodies - captured alone, gathered in quiet groups, or imprisoned in crowds of amorphous energy - move from absorption and poise to expansive forces of incitement and charge. Together they present rhapsodic explorations of mass, movement and identity in a globalized and technologically driven 21st century, alluding to recurring themes of figure and phantom, landscape and anatomy, faces and masks. This bold and subversive corporeal language captures the grave beauty and perpetual transformation of our contemporary moment. Articulating a vocabulary of painting as distinctive as it is visceral, Rouy's works are defined by contradictions: stasis and flow, precision and indeterminacy, chaos and harmony.
